NOISE

- Hype & Speculation
- Unsubstantiated Opinions
- Clickbait
- Headlines
- Social Media
- Chatter

INSIGHT

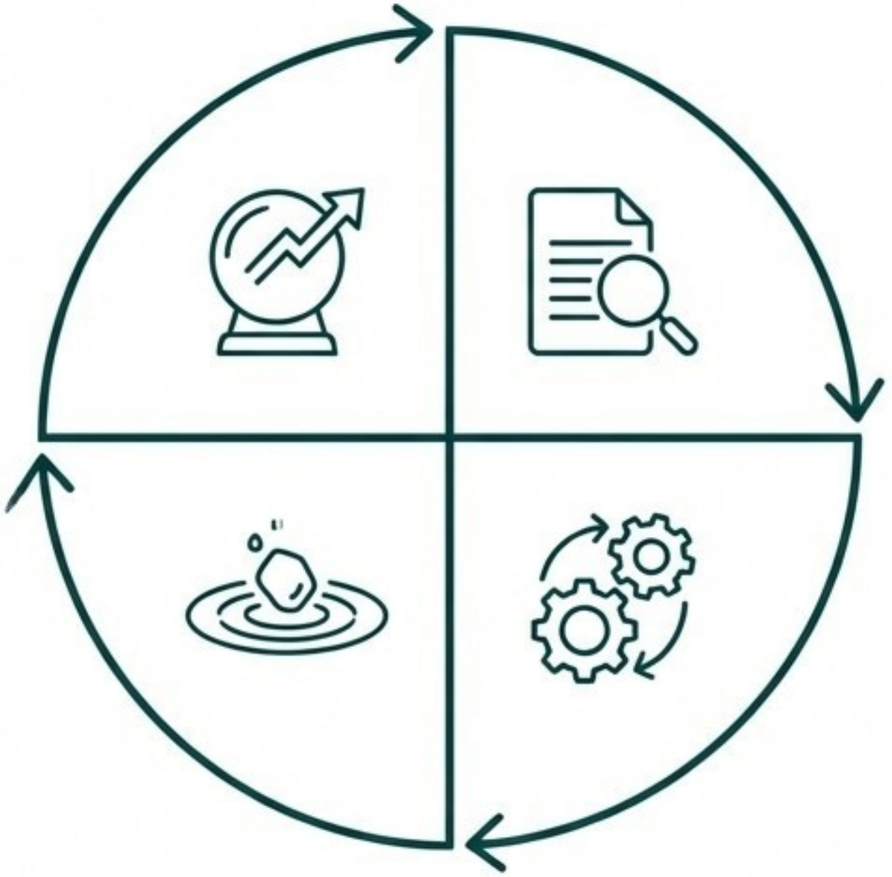

- Earnings Reports & Analyst Calls
- Central Bank Policy Changes
- Confirmed M&A Announcements
- Macroeconomic Date Shifts (GDP, Inflation)

The Litmus Test: Does this explain value creation or quantify risk?

From Information to Intelligence

Use this framework to deconstruct any news item.

4
Now What?
(What are the likely next steps or second-order effects?)

1
What?
(What precisely happened?)

3
So What?
(What is the immediate market/sector/company impact?)

2
Why?
(What were the underlying drivers?)

This turns passive news consumption into active analysis.

PUT IT TO WORK

Activity 1: The Curiosity Framework in Action

1. Pick one major financial headline from today.

2. Apply the Framework:

   - What happened? (1 sentence)
   - Why did it happen? (2-3 bullet points)
   - So what is the market impact?
   - Now What is the IB relevance? (M&A, a sector, a valuation?)

Goal: Build your financial reasoning muscle.

THINK LIKE AN ANALYST

Activity 2: Day in the Life (Role Play)

Scenario: You are an analyst on an active M&A deal. A major competitor to your target company just released unexpectedly poor earnings.

Your Tasks (In 5 Minutes):

- Identify the top 3 risks this news poses to your deal.
- Suggest 2 new areas for immediate due diligence.
- Prepare to present your findings clearly and logically.

Focus: Clarity, structured logic, and proactive curiosity.

Your Playbook Summary

- News → Insight → Action is the core workflow.
- IB fluency begins with disciplined curiosity.
- Headlines are not trivia; they drive real IB work.
- Strong analysts are masters of connection.

AMA: Ask Me Anything
